D. B. STUTSMAN, Chairman. S. D. ADAMS, Secretary. The editor of the Globe devoted considerable space last week to a reply to a few general remarks we made a few weeks ago, all of which he took upon himself personally. We did not intimate a newspaper fight or any other kind of a fight, ask your patronage and thus assist for we are not built on the lines of a pugilist. He intimates that he has a lot of "personal biography" stored up which he can use if he needs to. In justice to ourself and our readers, we demand that he or his friends publish anything they have in their possession against us. We are not afraid of our record, so do not be afraid of "inconveniencing" us. If you know anything against us, say it out, if you don't, you should not intimate that you do. He can defend whoever he pleases, but mus not in any manner leave the impression that he knows something about us, without saying what it is. We propose, as we said before, to publish whatever we consider to be news, regardless of whom it may "inconvenience". The interests of the people should never be subservient to those of any one man.
